Sub-Practices

Administrative

Administrative law governs the powers, procedures and acts of administrative agencies of government, which must act within Constitutional parameters. This area of law requires particular insight and experience, which is why Greenspoon Marder LLP has assembled a team of seasoned attorneys, including municipal, county and state legislators in order to form Greenspoon Marder's Administrative Law Practice Group.

Our team is experienced in a broad range of administrative matters at the local, state, and federal levels, including: the defense of challenged professionals in licensing and disciplinary matters; ethics and election matter disputes; special taxing districts; condominium and homeowner association issues; land use, zoning and environmental challenges; real property appraisals and disputes; agricultural classifications or exemptions; and contested administrative hearings.

Greenspoon Marder handles a vast array of matters in the area of administrative law, including but not limited to:

- Administrative Adjudications
- Administrative Agency Practice
- Administrative Hearings & Appeals
- Administrative Litigation
- Federal Administrative Law
- Judicial Review
- Professional Licensing and Defense
- Professional Licensing Regulation

For businesses considered to be highly regulated by state and federal laws, Greenspoon Marder's Administrative Law Practice Group and attorneys regularly represent clients before municipal, county, state and federal governing bodies, including the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), Federal Trade Commission (FTC), Department of Justice (DOJ), state attorneys' general, Department of Transportation (DOT), and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), among others.
